

A single liar moves the plain mean; the robust rules barely notice

Adversaries cycle through spoof-high, suppress and sign-flip, so the attack mix changes with the share, not just the count — hence the plain mean's peak at 30% (a sign-flip dominates) and its partial cancellation at 40%.